Israeli defense company’s new missile takes sneaky routes to surprise enemies

Rafael Advanced Defense Systems unveiled the long-range, autonomous, low-flying missile on Wednesday, which is immune to satellite jamming and uses artificial intelligence to tell adversaries apart from civilians.

(July 2, 2021 / JNS) Rafael Advanced Defense Systems unveiled a new long-range, autonomous and low-flying maneuvering missile on Wednesday. Called Sea Breaker, the missile is designed to surprise enemy targets and pose serious challenges to their radar systems.

Flying at sub-sonic rapid speeds and equipped with advanced electro-optic (camera) and infrared guidance systems, the Sea Breaker does not rely on satellite navigation, meaning that adversaries cannot disrupt its path to target, Rafael sources said on Tuesday.

“It has the ability to infiltrate defense systems, flying low. If it’s over the sea, it skims the water, and the ability of the enemy to disrupt it is very limited. Over land, it flies low and comes in using ‘sneaky’ routes, like a naval commando raid. Once it locks onto a ship, the ship’s time starts running out quickly. As the enemy radar tries to figure out where to send interceptors, the Sea Braker keeps maneuvering,” a company source told JNS.

The missile identifies and classifies targets automatically (a capability known as automatic target recognition) using advanced artificial intelligence. It is able to designate enemy targets, telling them apart from civilian assets.

“In the end it’s an autonomous missile,” said the source. “A person in the loop can stop the attack via a communications channel, change the target, or abort the mission,” he added.

The missile can be fired from shore-to-sea, sea-to-shore, sea-to-sea or be used as a surface-to-surface missile, the source said.

“Sea Breaker provides surgical, pin-point precision strikes from stand-off [far] ranges of up to 300 kilometers (186 miles),” Rafael said in a statement.

Capable of targeting both stationary and moving targets, the missile is specifically designed to infiltrate areas that are filled with radars and adversary missiles, known in military terminology as Anti Access/Area Denial (A2/AD) areas.

This means that the Sea Breaker can be used to infiltrate heavily guarded coastal areas, or, if used by a defending military, to alternatively defend such territories against enemies.

Sea Breaker can be launched from ships or from land.

Able to operate in all weather conditions, the missile delivers a 250-pound warhead to targets with high levels of accuracy, meaning that a single hit can neutralize a frigate-sized ship, said Rafael.

The same precision can be used to deliver a “warning” to a ship by hitting an area that would not sink it.

A Rafael video showed a synchronized attack of two Sea Breaker missiles coming in from opposite directions to strike a ship at the same time.

Its precision means that the missile is ideal for avoiding collateral damage, the Rafael source added.

“All of Rafael is involved in this development,” a second company source said.

In a reality in which many states and non-state actors have electronic warfare capabilities, which can disrupt missiles, and satellite-jamming capabilities that can cut off GNSS signals from space, the missile’s passive guidance system make it immune to such obstacles, he added.

“Not being dependent on satellites is core capability,” said the second source.

Sea Breaker is made up of missile, a radar, a launcher and a command-and-control center. Even clients that lack ocean-going fleets can use the missile to protect their shores effectively, according to the source.

The mobile launcher means that it can be loaded onto a truck, or an aircraft, and easily moved.

The Sea Breaker is less than four meters long, and weighs under 400 kilograms (882 pounds), allowing it to maneuver “sneakily,” according to the source.

If fired at a “crowded” area filled with military and civilian ships, the missile uses its algorithms to classify the targets as it approaches them. It also uses scene-matching technology to guide it to targets, based on the previous programming.

“It can be part of a coordinated barrage. The attacker can decide if he wants to hit an enemy [missile] launcher, a ship’s bridge, or deliver a warning,” said the source.

Its potential targets include naval ships, communication and logistical centers, airfields, port facilities, enemy headquarters, anti-aircraft batteries and insurgent infrastructure.

Rafael did not provide details on might purchase the missile. The company is believed to be in advanced negotiations with multiple international potential customers.

5 Bizarre New Plagues that have Hit America Within the Last 30 Days

Everywhere you look, things are getting weird, and I don't mean that in a good way. Throughout all of our ups and downs over the decades, one thing that our society could always count on for a certain degree of consistency was nature.

But now nature is going haywire at the same time that the very fabric of our society seems to be unraveling all around us.

In this article, I am going to share with you a number of items that have been brought to my attention over the past month. On their own, each one of these items is "unusual", but the fact that so many really strange things are all happening simultaneously is definitely cause for alarm.

In this article, I am not even going to bring in stories from the rest of the globe. For example, right now a horrific plague of mice is causing massive problems in Australia. Perhaps I will talk about this in a future article, but in this one I am just going to focus on this country.

The following are 5 bizarre new plagues that have made headlines in the United States within the last 30 days...

#1 A Plague Of Rattlesnakes

The endless megadrought in our western states is having a lot of unexpected consequences, and this includes a plague of rattlesnakes. According to the Daily Mail, rattlesnakes have been moving into urban areas in California in large numbers because of the exceedingly dry conditions...

Much of the US west is currently undergoing a record heatwave and its worst drought in at least 20 years, with temperatures soaring into the triple digits this weekend, and wildlife experts are saying the extreme weather is creating the perfect conditions for increased interactions between humans and animals.

Rattlesnakes, in particular, have been seen moving into urban areas in larger numbers, and are being found on porches, yards, nearby pools and under children's play equipment.

Len Ramirez catches rattlesnakes for a living, and he says that they are being found "everywhere" at this point...

Len Ramirez stalked through the dried landscape, scanning the ground ahead searching for movement. Called out to an estate in Napa Valley, the owner of Ramirez Rattlesnake Removal company was finishing up his last job of another busy day wrangling, removing and relocating snakes from homes across northern California. He'd found three in just this yard, including one nestled roughly 1,000 yards from the pool.

Rattlesnakes are everywhere these days, he says - on front porches, in potted plants, and under children's play equipment. "I am busier than I have ever been. Complaints are coming in from all over the state."

According to Ramirez, there have been jobs that have required him to remove "more than 60 snakes at a time".

Unfortunately, this plague is likely to continue to get worse as long as the megadrought persists.

#2 A Plague Of Grasshoppers

The megadrought in our western states has also created a plague of grasshoppers.

It turns out that the little critters absolutely love the hot, dry conditions, and they have been multiplying like crazy.

Federal officials are extremely concerned, and they are gearing up for "their largest grasshopper-killing campaign since the 1980s"...

A punishing drought in the U.S. West is drying up waterways, sparking wildfires and leaving farmers scrambling for water. Next up: a plague of voracious grasshoppers.

Federal agriculture officials are launching what could become their largest grasshopper-killing campaign since the 1980s amid an outbreak of the drought-loving insects that cattle ranchers fear will strip bare public and private rangelands.

#3 Birds Dropping Dead In Very Large Numbers

As I discussed last week, birds are suddenly dropping dead in very large numbers in multiple U.S. states. In Indiana, unusual bird deaths have now been reported in fifteen different counties, and authorities have absolutely no idea why this is happening...

The Department of Natural Resources warns that songbirds have now died in fifteen counties across Indiana and more across the region.

"I've never seen them exhibit the goopy eyes and crustiness in addition to the neurological symptoms," Allisyn Gillet, DNR ornithologist said.

Gillet says she's getting reports of nearly a dozen songbirds a week. In the last month, she says they've had at least 100 reports and no one knows exactly what's causing it.

In addition to Indiana, large numbers of birds are also dropping dead in Washington D.C., Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky and Ohio.

#4 Unprecedented Flooding In Detroit

A massive storm last Friday turned I-94 into a lake and caused horrific flooding in both Detroit and Dearborn.

Many areas remain underwater as I write this article, and police are warning people not to play in the water because there is "a good chance" that it contains raw sewage...

Historic rainfall on Friday caused power outages in metro Detroit, at least 1,000 cars abandoned as highways filled up with water, and countless flooded residential basements in the area. The flooding produced more viral videos, including one showing a man jet-skiing down the street in Dearborn, as well as a surreal image of people playing in a flooded part of a highway as if it were a beach on one of the Great Lakes, prompting an even more surreal tweet from Michigan State Police.

("Finally in the things I would never thought I would have to say: Do not go into the water," an MSP officer tweeted. "This water has debris, sharp metal, submerged cars, gasoline and oil floating in it. There is also a good chance that there is sewage also in the water. In other words it's gross!")

#5 The Worst Heatwave To Ever Hit The Northwest

We have just seen the highest temperature that has ever been recorded in the city of Portland.

The same thing is true for Seattle.

And the same thing is true for dozens of other cities in the Northwest. In fact, the little community of Lytton in British Columbia actually just recorded the hottest temperature in the history of Canada.

This unprecedented heatwave is being caused by an absolutely massive "heat dome", and CBS News Meteorologist Jeff Berardelli says that there is only a "1/10,000+ chance" that something like this could happen.

Unfortunately, this heat dome looks like it is going to be around for a while...

There is no timetable for how long a heat dome can last, but things won't immediately cool down in much of the Pacific Northwest. Forecasts have inland areas such as Spokane, Washington and Boise, Idaho reaching triple-digit temperatures for the rest of the week. The National Weather Service's excessive heat warning is in effect until 11 p.m. PT on Thursday.

So why are so many crazy things happening to the United States all at the same time?

I don't know.

But I do believe that our nation has entered a time of tremendous instability, and I believe that it is going to get a whole lot worse.

The stable conditions of the last several decades are disappearing, and I believe that we have now entered an era when global events are going to get really wild.

Unfortunately, most Americans are still anticipating that things will get back to the way they were in the "old days", but at this point the "old days" are gone for good.

Going Down

By Daymond Duck

Published on July 4

The following events have happened in the last few days. These and all the things that are going down seem to indicate that history is at the end of the age.

One, concerning Jerusalem: on Thursday, June 24, 2021, Honduras became the fourth nation to move its Embassy to Jerusalem, thus recognizing Jerusalem as the capital of Israel (the other 3 are the U.S., Guatemala, and Kosovo).

Two, concerning control of the Temple Mount: on June 27, 2021, because of threats against Jews visiting the Temple Mount, a large group of police escorted a Jewish politician named Itamar Ben-Gvir on a tour of the Holy Site.

Ben-Gvir later said, "We will never cede the Temple Mount, the most sacred place in Judaism. We demand full sovereignty, raising the Israeli flag there and removing any Waqf element (Palestinian-led violence) seeking to harm Jews."

Three, concerning a resumption of sacrifices: on June 28, 2021, a small group of Jewish priests reenacted the offering of a sacrifice at Mitzpeh Yericho to remember past tragedies that have happened to the Jewish nation.

Rabbi Hillel Weiss, a former spokesman for the Jewish Sanhedrin, said, "Every reenactment comes closer, teaches us more of what we need to know to bring back the service forever.... Technically, we could go up to the Temple Mount right now and begin the service. All of the necessary elements stand ready. We are preparing several options for each element to make this possible. But it is not our intention to make a provocative political statement. The Temple is the source of peace, not conflict. Our only intention is to bring about the prophesied House of Prayer for all nations” (Adam Berkowitz, Israel365 News, June 29, 2021).

Four, concerning freedom of speech: on June 22, 2021, it was reported that the U.S. Dept. of Justice (DOJ) seized several Iranian-backed foreign-run terrorist organization websites in addition to Iran’s state-run T.V. website because they were posting “disinformation.”

In the U.S., Pres. Biden and the DOJ call Trump supporters and those that criticize Covid-19 vaccinations domestic terrorists.

There seems to be some evidence that the FBI encouraged and facilitated the Jan. 6, 2021, demonstrations at the capitol, and now the DOJ is prosecuting citizen protesters as terrorists.

This is the point: the seizure of foreign media websites could easily evolve into the DOJ seizing U.S. media websites.

Website owners that disagree with the government on some issues should be aware.

Five, in past articles, this writer has suggested that some politicians may be trying to collapse the U.S. economy to bring in a one-world economic system and currency.

This sounds ridiculous, but it is now being reported that California Gov. Newsom is planning to pay the rent on all Californians that are behind on their payments.

Six, on June 23, 2021, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) told the U.S. Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that Pfizer and Moderna Covid-19 vaccination fact sheets will contain a heart inflammation warning label “in light of increased reports of post-vaccine heart issues.”

On June 23, 2021, Dr. Robert Malone, inventor of mRNA technology, told viewers of Fox News’ Tucker Carlson Tonight:

- “The government is not being transparent with us” (about the risks of the Covid-19 vaccines).
- “We don’t really have the information we need to make a reasonable decision.”
- When Carlson asked Malone, “Do the benefits outweigh the risks,” Malone replied, “I have a bias that the benefits probably don’t outweigh the risks.”

On June 24, 2021, an article by Matt Lamb on LifeSiteNews.com said:

- The Service Employees International Union (SEIU), the largest healthcare union in the U.S., has come out against forcing its members to be vaccinated against Covid-19 because none of the vaccines have full FDA approval.
- The New York State Nurses’ Association (NYSNA) has come out against making Covid-19 vaccinations a state or federal condition for employment.
- The American Medical Association (AMA) has come out against forcing employees to be vaccinated, at least for the time being.

(First Note: On June 28, 2021, Wisconsin Sen. Ron. Johnson held a press conference and let people talk about their adverse effects. According to Johnson, people “are having a hard time [getting] their truths communicated without being vilified, without being ridiculed, without being censored.”)

(Second Note: Concerning the Delta Variant, on June 30, 2021, the pro-liberty group Brighteon posted the following: “New research finds that ‘fully vaccinated’ individuals are suffering an eight times higher mortality rate than the non-vaccinated. And a stunning report out of the U.K. finds that 62 percent of those dying from covid are people who have been vaccinated.”)

(Third Note: The stated reason why the mortality rate of the non-vaccinated is less than the mortality rate of the fully-vaccinated is that the non-vaccinated still have their natural immunity, but the fully-vaccinated do not.)

Seven, concerning great wickedness (Days of Noah) at the end of the age and the efforts of Democrats to disarm Americans: on June 23, 2021, it was reported that an off-duty U.S. Border Patrol Agent took his family on a fishing trip to the Rio Grande River.

They spotted and photographed 3 men (thought to be members of a drug cartel) crossing the river with guns and backpacks (presumed to be narcotics).

As this writer sees it, in recent months:

- Many criminals have been let out of prison free (released without bail).
- Many Black Lives Matters and Antifa rioters, looters and arsonists have not even been arrested (police have stood by and done nothing).
- The charges against many rioters and looters were dropped without prosecution even though they have been identified in videos of their crime (prosecutors said there is not enough evidence).
- Democrats bailed some rioters and looters out of jail.
- Some Democrats want to defund the police, and some have tied the hands of the police (the police cannot chase criminals that run; the police cannot use restraints, handcuffs, etc.).
- Democrats have thrown the U.S. Mexican border wide open for gun-carrying members of drug cartels.

How can we not believe that some politicians only want to disarm honest citizens?

If any lives matter (black, white, Hispanic, Asian, whatever), why are drugs that kill multitudes of every race allowed to pour across our border?

Finally, are you Rapture Ready?

If you want to be rapture ready and go to heaven, you must be born again (John 3:3). God loves you, and if you have not done so, sincerely admit that you are a sinner; believe that Jesus is the virgin-born, sinless Son of God who died for the sins of the world, was buried, and raised from the dead; ask Him to forgive your sins, cleanse you, come into your heart and be your Saviour; then tell someone that you have done this.
