

NEWS BYTES

October 5, 2022

No. 1084

Since 2001

A ministry of Calvary Chapel of Appleton

“Let us be alert to the season in which we are living. It is the season of the Blessed Hope, calling for us to cut our ties with the world and build ourselves on this One who will soon appear. He is our hope—a Blessed Hope enabling us to rise above our times and fix our gaze upon Him.” Tozer

Will Europe Turn To New 'Club of Nations' To Help Get Through Next Crisis

On the tail end of one of the most eventful months in recent UK history, new elected British Prime Minister, Liz Truss, and her cabinet, are considering whether to attend the European Political 'Club of Nations'.

The European Political Community is Emmanuel Macron's scheme to bring together EU nations and countries outside the bloc, potentially including the UK.

Getting Britain around the table, to discuss core issues facing the continent, is now a key aim - according to some EU diplomats.

There are hopes the gloomy economic outlook and energy crisis could bring Liz Truss to the table.

The meeting is scheduled to take place on October 6th, 2022, in Prague, in the Czech Republic.

In addition to the 27 members of the EU, several other nations are set to be invited including the UK, Ukraine, Norway, Switzerland and Turkey.

Six Western Balkans nations are also likely to be invited, along with Iceland, Liechtenstein, Moldova, Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan.

Macron described the goal of the club earlier this year in a speech at the Conference on the Future of Europe:

"It is our historic obligation... to create what I would describe before you today as a European Political Community.

"This new European organization would allow democratic European nations that subscribe to our shared core values to find a new space for political and security cooperation, cooperation in the energy sector, in transport, investments, infrastructures, the free movement of persons and in particular of our youth.

"Joining it would not prejudge future accession to the European Union necessarily, and it would not be closed to those who have left the EU.

"It would bring our Europe together, respecting its true geography, on the basis of its democratic values, with the desire to preserve the unity of our continent and by preserving the strength and ambition of our integration."

The Russia/Ukraine war, coupled with the Covid-19 pandemic, and other economic and social strife is currently rampant. Could it be that the French President Mr. Macron believes The Club of Nations meeting could result in a collection of cohesive ideals that will thwart any potential social and civil unrest?

It is plainly obvious that if climate, economic and social resolutions are not established in Europe the public will become unsettled. In the UK alone, energy costs are scheduled to significantly rise this winter which will upset, and in some circumstances devastate the country's citizen's economy.

Now that the late Queen Elizabeth II has officially been laid to rest, it would appear the "powers-that-be" are now moving at quicker than lightning speed to restructure the UK and indeed the entire European economic and social system in her wake.

The new King, Charles III, has yet to make any significant decrees regarding the UK's potential involvement with the French-driven "Club of Nations". However, in 2011, the then [Prince] Charles of Wales, authored a book titled, "Harmony". The literature discussed within contained the now UK King's personal views and recommendations for global social, climate, and economic improvement.

Most of these views would be in line with similar proposals previously put forward by other European diplomats and it would not be surprising if he voiced support for this new development. However, one of the most disturbing views the former Prince championed was population control.

In the past, King Charles III has not been hesitant to vocalize his opinions concerning climate and social change, albeit world reform. Today, he is now the King of England and the Commonwealth. Declaring an obvious interest in global change, he will, and can, wield with considerable power. Whether or not King Charles III attends The Club of Nations meeting in person is with no relevance to be an integral part of this new and potential system in the making.

As he did so on January 22, 2008, [then Prince] Charles made an appearance in Abu Dhabi for the World Future Energy Summit in the form of a hologram. Either way, he will be there whether by artificial means, or by the proxy of the Prime Minister Liz Truss.

Bible prophecy experts continue to watch Europe for the emergence of a 10 nation alliance that is described in the Book of Revelation. It is out of this alliance of 10 that the Antichrist emerges. Some have speculated about whether these prophecies in Revelation refer to 10 nations, 10 world regions, or simply 10 leaders.

While there are more questions than answers at this point what direction this new Club of Nations will go, it will be worth keeping an eye on. We will keep you updated of new developments as they happen.

Erdogan Threatens Greece

by Uzay Bulut

September 29, 2022 at 4:00 am

- "We have only one sentence for Greece: Do not forget Izmir [the city of Smyrna]. Your occupying the [Aegean] islands will not stop us; we will do what is necessary when the time comes. You know what we say: 'Unexpectedly one night we shall come to [conquer] you.'" — Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan, sondakika.com, September 4, 2022.
 - "The final years of the Ottoman Empire were catastrophic for its non-Turkish, non-Muslim minorities. From 1913 to 1923, its rulers deported, killed, or otherwise persecuted staggering numbers of men, women and children in an attempt to preserve 'Turkey for the Turks,' setting a modern precedent for how a regime can commit genocide against its own citizens in pursuit of political ends, while largely escaping accountability." — George N. Shirinian, Genocide in the Ottoman Empire: Armenians, Assyrians, and Greeks, 1913-1923.
 - The Turkish attacks against the Greeks and Armenians of Smyrna began [in 1922] with looting, rapes and massacres, and ended with a fire that destroyed the Christian districts of the city.
 - "In September 1922, the richest city of the Mediterranean was burned, and countless numbers of Christian refugees killed. The city was Smyrna, and the event was the final episode of the 20th Century's first genocide — the slaughter of three million Armenians, Greeks and Assyrians by the Ottoman Empire. The slaughter at Smyrna occurred as warships of the great powers stood by — the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy." — Lou Ureneck, Smyrna, September 1922.
 - The Republic of Turkey actually boasts of its genocide.
 - Since the founding of the Republic of Turkey in 1923, no factual information has been taught to Turkish schoolchildren about the extreme brutality, massacres, rapes, pillaging and other atrocities that indigenous Greeks and Armenians of Smyrna were subjected to at the hands of the Turks. The truth about the identity of the arsonists is categorically denied. For the past 100 years, Turkey has blamed the victims of the genocide for their own extermination.
 - September 2022 marks the 100th anniversary of the genocide in Smyrna. Although the Turkish government still takes pride in its slaughter, everyone else would do well to remember and honor the memories of the victims and prevent further Turkish aggression. One way for Western governments to do this is officially to recognize the 1913-23 genocide, but above all, stop Erdogan's continued threats against Greece.
-

Turkey's President Recep Tayyip Erdogan is escalating his threats to invade Greece. Referring to Turkey's genocidal attack against Greeks and Armenians of the city of Smyrna in September 1922, he warned exactly 100 years later this month: "We have only one sentence for Greece: Do not forget Izmir [Smyrna]... we will do what is necessary when the time comes." Pictured: Thousands of local Greeks, fleeing the genocidal Turkish army of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, attempt to escape by ship at the port of Smyrna in September 1922. (Photo by Topical Press Agency/Getty Images)

The president of a NATO member country, Turkey's Recep Tayyip Erdogan, is escalating his threats to invade Greece, another NATO member. On September 27, he said:

"The weapons stockpiled [by Greece] in Western Thrace and the islands make no sense to us because our power is far beyond them, but we remind you that this means a covert occupation [of Turkey by Greece]..."

"We would like to remind Greece: Come to your senses. Do you think the support [for Greece] from the US and Europe will save you? It will not. You simply spin your wheels; it does nothing else."

Erdogan has been making similar hostile statements for months. On September 4, he again targeted Greece in a public speech:

"Greeks, look at history. If you go any further, the price will be heavy. We have only one sentence for Greece: Do not forget Izmir [the city of Smyrna]. Your occupying the [Aegean] islands will not stop us; we will do what is necessary when the time comes. You know what we say: 'Unexpectedly one night we shall come to [conquer] you.'"

A week before that, on August 30, celebrated in Turkey as "Victory Day", Erdogan said:

"We see our [Greeks] enemies' destroying our cities during their withdrawal [from Anatolia in 1922] as proof of their vile character. Just as they are today."

When Erdogan told Greeks "not to forget Izmir", he was referring to Turkey's genocidal attack against Greeks and Armenians of the city, also known as Smyrna, in 1922.

The 1913-1923 Christian genocide by Ottoman Turkey was a deliberate attempt to eliminate the Greek, Assyrian and Armenian presence in the region.

The genocide began in 1913 and expanded across Ottoman Turkey, targeting Christian and Yazidi communities. The violent campaign -- motivated by both Islamic jihad and Turkish nationalism -- aimed at annihilating Christian peoples of Asia Minor to create a Turkish- and Muslim-dominated country.

The first phase of the genocide was committed by the Ottoman Committee of Union and Progress, also known as the "Young Turks." The second phase, from 1919 to 1923, including the Smyrna attack and genocide by Turkish nationalist forces, almost completed the genocide.

George N. Shirinian's book, Genocide in the Ottoman Empire: Armenians, Assyrians, and Greeks, 1913-1923, states:

"The final years of the Ottoman Empire were catastrophic for its non-Turkish, non-Muslim minorities. From 1913 to 1923, its rulers deported, killed, or otherwise persecuted staggering numbers of men, women and children in an attempt to preserve 'Turkey for the Turks,' setting a modern precedent for how a regime can commit genocide against its own citizens in pursuit of political ends, while largely escaping accountability."

Before the 1922 genocide, Smyrna, an ancient, prosperous, cosmopolitan city built by Greeks, and known as the "Pearl of the Orient" on the Aegean coast, was primarily Greek with large Armenian and other non-Muslim communities. This month marks the 100th commemoration of its destruction.

James Marketos, an attorney who sits on the board of the American Hellenic Institute, said in 2012:

"From ancient times, and through the Roman, Byzantine and Ottoman ages, the city remained essentially Greek. The later centuries saw the advent of Armenian, Turkish, Jewish, European and American influences, but through it all, the predominant spirit remained Greek."

"In that society," wrote scholars Evangelia Boubougiatzi, Ifigenia Vamvakidou and Argyris Kyridis, "Greeks had the dominant position, both in a demographic and an economic level."

The Turkish attacks against the Greeks and Armenians of Smyrna began with looting, rapes and massacres, and ended with a fire that destroyed the Christian districts of the city.

Eyewitness reports state that the fire began on September 13, 1922 -- four days after Turkish forces retook control of the city from the Greek administration -- and lasted until September 22. A short documentary produced by Glenn Beck describes the Smyrna fire.

Many of the genocide survivors fled to neighboring Greece. Properties and estates that the victims left behind in Smyrna were illegally seized by Turks.

Scholar Lou Ureneck describes the genocide of Smyrna:

"In September 1922, the richest city of the Mediterranean was burned, and countless numbers of Christian refugees killed. The city was Smyrna, and the event was the final episode of the 20th Century's first genocide — the slaughter of three million Armenians, Greeks and Assyrians by the Ottoman Empire. The slaughter at Smyrna occurred as warships of the great powers stood by — the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy."

The Republic of Turkey actually boasts of its genocide. Turkey still claims it was the Greek military that set fire to Smyrna, destroying much of the city. The "1922 victory", which the Turkish state refers to as "the liberation or salvation of Izmir" is annually celebrated in official and non-official ceremonies. Despite all the evidence, the fire is solely referred to in Turkish schools as part of the Greek-Turkish war, in which, according to Turkish historiography, "Turks emerged victorious against the invading Greeks."

Since the founding of the Republic of Turkey in 1923, no factual information has been taught to Turkish schoolchildren about the extreme brutality, massacres, rapes, pillaging and other atrocities that indigenous Greeks and Armenians of Smyrna were subjected to at the hands of the Turks. The truth about the identity of the arsonists is categorically denied. For the past 100 years, Turkey has blamed the victims of the genocide for their own extermination.

In 2007, however, the International Association of Genocide Scholars (IAGS) officially acknowledged the genocide inflicted on the Armenian, Assyrian and Greek populations of the Ottoman Empire. IAGS' resolution stated:

"Whereas the denial of genocide is widely recognized as the final stage of genocide, enshrining impunity for the perpetrators of genocide, and demonstrably paving the way for future genocides."

Turkey's continual denial of its genocide, and even its callous pride in the event, has for decades been accompanied by the destruction, abuse and appropriation of the Greek and Armenian cultural heritage in the country. On June 21, 2019, Turkish media reported that the Saint-Jean Theologos Greek Girls School in Smyrna, which has been empty since 1922, was plundered; its doors and windows removed, and its valuables looted. The historic building, now owned by Turkish Undersecretariat of the Treasury, has mostly been used by homeless drug addicts.

According to a recent report in the Turkish media, the Armenian Surp Sarkis Church in the Menemen district of Smyrna will be "restored" as a "Memorial Museum Science and Art Centre" after being used as a warehouse and a stable.

September 2022 marks the 100th anniversary of the genocide in Smyrna. Although the Turkish government still takes pride in its slaughter, everyone else would do well to remember and honor the memories of the victims and prevent further Turkish aggression. One way for Western governments to do this is officially to recognize the 1913-23 genocide, but above all, stop Erdogan's continued threats against Greece.

Rapture Ready Headlines – A Sampling

United Nations Food Chief Warns Of ‘Chaos,’ ‘Hell’ And Wide Spread Food Shortage Next Year: The World Is Facing ‘A Perfect Storm On Top Of A Perfect Storm’

The United Nations' Food chief is urging the public to prepare for famine and widespread food shortage next year amid an severe fertilizer supply shortage.

Top doctor who once promoted COVID vaccines on TV, now says they should be halted

A highly respected cardiologist and expert in evidence-based medicine was prompted to take a critical look at the vaccine data after the unexpected death of his father 6 months after vaccination. He spent 6 months carefully studying the data and consulting with other top scientists. He's now calling for a halt to the vaccines based on the data. He called it "the greatest miscarriage of medical science that we will see in our lifetime."

Pedophiles Celebrate: Spanish Minister Declares Children Can Have Sex ‘With Whomever They Want’ If They ‘Consent’

On September 21, during a hearing in Congress on the pro-trans and abortion law, Spain's Minister of Equality called pedophilia a "right." The communist Minister, Irene Montero, shocked her fellow politicians when she chose sexual deviants over minors and declared, "Children should have the right to have sexual relations with whomever they want, as long as they consent."

NJ Department Of Education Threatens Schools That Refuse To Promote Gender Identity To Minors

New Jersey teaching standards now require second graders to learn about transgenderism and gender identity.

COVID-19 relief fraud likely ‘biggest fraud’ in US history, tax watchdog warns

While the federal government has allotted more than $5 trillion to COVID-19 economic relief and stimulus, undetermined billions in taxpayer dollars have been fraudulently siphoned from the aid spending, likely amounting to the "biggest fraud that the country's seen," according to Americans for Tax Reform.

Guardian: Leaked Plans for a Global Carbon Tax

According to The Guardian, poor countries will demand a global carbon tax this week on airline travel, shipping fuel and fossil fuel extraction.

One of the last remaining gas pipelines into Europe may be SHUT DOWN in legal dispute, unleashing “End of Days” energy crisis without precedent

Yet another gas pipeline to Europe – one of the last that is still online, just to be clear – faces closure due to an ongoing legal spat between Russia and Ukraine.

162 Researchers From Top US Nuclear Facility Now Working for China: Report

More than 150 scientists who worked in a top U.S. national security laboratory were hired by the Chinese regime to do research, according to a new report. Much of that research has directly advanced Chinese military technology, which now threatens U.S. national security.

Green group influencing Biden admin has deep ties to Chinese government

The Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), a major U.S. green group that has influenced Biden administration policymaking, has deep ties to the Chinese government.

Massive planned famines are coming in the very near future! American farmers warn of massive unmet food supply needs!

Biden has purposely engineered a food shortage. Do you really think that the destruction of 108 food processing plants, since he came into office is a coincidence? Biden's policies are purposely designed to dramatically drive up the price of shipping food. Changes in fertilizer regulations will yield substantially less food . Biden's people do nothing about the food shortage. And so the story goes without end. It is clear that Biden is serving the World Economic Forum who want you to eat nothing but bugs.